Did you know that the final seven paragraphs that Paulo Freire wrote in Pedagogy of the Oppressed—the most widely sold book of educational theory in the world—are completely missing in the only translation that presently exists from Portuguese to English?

Would you like to study about the art and politics of Freirian translation alongside a recently published philosophical biography of Freire with that book's translator?

Does the intellectual and political history of Freire's life and thought interest you?

Would you enjoy reading, writing, and talking about other texts (including some obscure ones) that Freire wrote besides, and alongside, Pedagogy of the Oppressed?

If these questions provoke you, you may enjoy taking this summer seminar with Sam Rocha. Course audits are also welcomed so long as attendance is possible.

Rocha has published on Freire's philosophy and theology, personalism, and multilingualism using his own translations. Rocha also completed the full text translation of Walter Kohan's 2021 book Paulo Freire: A Philosophical Biography. In 2016, Rocha was chair and director of the EDST trilingual, international conference on Paulo Freire. Feel free to email him with questions at sam.rocha@ubc.ca.
